

Chances of Success

Every couple's individual chance of success is dependent on an enormous number of factors and these factors greatly influence whether their individual chances as a couple is below average. The age of a woman attempting IVF treatment to achieve a reasonable outcome for pregnancy is in the early 30-35's. Leaving it longer significantly reduces your chances and once you've hit the mid to late 30's the drop off in success rates reduces even further.

Factors influencing infertility:

- The women's age. A reduction in fertility is significant as a women's age increases.
- The couples lifestyle habits.
- Whether it's primary or secondary infertility
- Sperm quality

These factors may also be compounded for some couples and this would greatly influence their chances of success.

We see a remarkable reduction for women at age 38, then a big drop again at 39 and 40.

The overall success rate of IVF for all couples regardless of age is 44%.

- For women under 35 year old the average success rate is approximately 55%.
- For women at age 43 the chances fall to around 1%.

During the year 2012 at Next Generation Fertility around 80% of women starting ART treatment (i.e. IVF or ICSI) achieved an embryo transfer. Of those women who had an embryo transfer the pregnancy rates (i.e. a clinical pregnancy test) for different age groups are shown.

Miscarriage rates are similar to the general population and vary between 15-30% depending on multiple factors and the woman's age.

Referral Information:

As a new or continuing patient at Next Generation Fertility it is required that you have a current referral from your GP or other medical specialist to one of our fertility specialists. You must bring this referral with you on the day of your first appointment.

A referral from your GP lasts for twelve (12) months, however you can request an indefinite referral which will be valid for the entire duration of your treatment. If you bring a referral from a specialist, this will only be valid for a three (3) month period and must be updated after this time.
